HOUSEHOLD HINTS

SHIPBOARD ETIQUETTE

A famous old wit once wrote the directions for making a successful Welsh rarebit. He began by saying: "First catch the rabbit," and so I say to you, when going on board a boat—first get a chaperon. There is no other place of amusement where it is quite so imperative that young men and girls should not be by themselves. Indeed, a man who owns a yacht, catboat or yawl of any size, will always suggest a party of more than two, and the third person must be a married woman.

The owner of the boat sends a row boat or gig to the shore to meet the guests and when they get aboard the yacht he makes quite sure that the chaperon is not neglected nor pushed aside in some obscure corner of the boat. She also has the seat of honor at the table. Here is a place where the man is host, and he performs all the duties that a woman would as hostess in her own home. He it is who suggests cooling drinks, luncheon, fixes comfortable seats for his guests and offers other such bits of service as he can render. The women aboard are his guests and await his suggestions.

If the party is to be of only a few hours' duration—such as to view some races—then no baggage is taken along, except in the form of extra wraps for personal comfort. The proper dress for shipboard does not consist of "peek-a-boo" lingerie dresses, nor elaborate foulard silks. White or colored linen suits, blue serge skirts and smart shirt waists, white duck shirts, etc., are rampant in which a girl should appear when on such a trip.

Many men are very particular about the deck of their boats being scratched by the heavy nails in boots and in such cases you can have rubber heels put on your shoes or wear canvas boots with rubber soles and no heels on them. This request is seldom made, however, except in cases of extremely handsome boats.

On longer trips, where the weekend is to be passed in cruising from one harbor to another, a suit case of clothing can be taken along. If you are to go on shore to some entertainment, then an evening gown should be taken for this purpose. Your host will always tell you whether you are going to land or stay on board all of the time. But this fancy dress is not to be worn on the ship. Yachting is a very informal sport.

Let the girl who usually spends an hour or more in the bathroom at home, remember that she must hurry on board a ship—and not impose on the good nature of others. Let her do her fussing in her own stateroom, and waste no time over her bath.

A man should be extremely careful in forming a party to meet on his boat, and get very congenial people together. On land, where disagreeable conversations are started, a girl can easily walk away, but on board a boat she is not so privileged. And the guests who do meet in the small confines of shipboard should all bend every energy to be agreeable. If you are the sort of girl that hates crowds, and like to sit alone with one man, then decline all invitations to yacht parties.

A girl passed three days on a yachting party, and a few days after she returned her host received a set of silver for his bureau engraved with the ship's flag. You cannot imagine a man more embarrassed than he was. If you have been on a short cruise, and your host has been a most charming one, and you feel that you want to send him some remembrance of the trip, why, do so by all means. But, if you value your standing with the man, make the gift some trifle—not a set of silver. A man who owns a yacht is always glad of fresh pillows for his chairs and couches. A "housewife" is another practical gift which the average girl can make, a pretty pin cushion, or some little trinket of this sort that can be used about the ship. Send this along with a little note, saying you had a lovely time.

The chaperon on board ship never retires until all the girls have said good-night to the men and gone to their various staterooms. The men are privileged to sit on the deck, smoke and talk all night if they choose, but the girls should retire at a reasonable hour, and should rise in the morning in time for the hour appointed for breakfast.

There is very little chance for tipping on board a private boat. However, the steward who makes up your bed and attends to your stateroom should be given a tip after a long cruise. Of course, for a short afternoon trip, or one lasting a day, no tips are necessary. On long cruises where the steward has been called upon to attend to a seasick guest, or been asked to confer other personal attentions, he should be given a dollar bill at least.
